

Brendan Reeves is all set for this weekend's final round of the NEC Australian Rally Championship, NGK Rally of Melbourne, which kicks off at Melbourne's New Quay tonight.

After competing in last weekend's Mt Buller Sprint, in which he finished sixth, Brendo and co-driving sister, Rhianon Smyth, have had a busy week of testing and recce to make sure they are in perfect condition for their "home" gravel event.

Currently sitting in fourth place in the Championship, a good result could see the duo jump to third place overall, in what would be a great result in their rookie season.

Having competed in Rally of Melbourne last year, Brendo is familiar with the roads and will know what to expect this weekend. A top five result would be just reward for a great rookie season for the 19 year old.
